Yours is the day, yours also the night; you established the luminaries and the sun. You have fixed all the bounds of the earth; you made summer and winter.(Psalm 74:16-17)

The days of summer are well upon us and will be filled, hopefully, with opportunities for vacations, more time with family, summer celebrations and a chance for respite and relaxation. We’re looking forward to easing pandemic restrictions, while remaining mindful and diligent in the face of new variants and containing the spread of COVID. We’re living in a hybrid world with expectations for in-person and online options, varying mask restrictions, and new options for work, entertainment, and recreation. The church also finds itself in the midst of this “new normal.”

At Zwingli, we will continue to be active this summer in the best and safest way we can. Face Book livestreaming of services will continue alongside in person worship (meaning folk on vacation can now tune in to a live service while away! :). Our young people and families will have a chance to experience a new version of Vacation Bible School along with sister churches (A OK Fridays). We’ll return to Perkasie Park on August 22nd for worship and a luncheon. The church will continue the discernment process for becoming an Open and Affirming Congregation during the summer, culminating in an opportunity to affirm our Open and Affirming Covenant in late August and early September. There will be chances at Zwingli for fellowship, youth gatherings, ministry meetings, the Wednesday Prayer Circle and worship. I’m also excited to be serving with Ed Bibic and the Rev. Tony Villareal as delegates to General Synod 33, the national gathering of the United Church of Christ which will be held July 11-18. The Synod will be conducted virtually for the first time in the UCC’s history, while the PSEC delegates will gather in person at a local venue July 16-18 during the most intense business portions of the Synod.

Summer is always a time at Zwingli when certain aspects of church life slow a little while others keep humming along. No matter where you may be or what you find yourself doing during the summer months, please do your best to remain faithful to your call as members of Zwingli UCC and Christ’s church. Continue to pray for Zwingli. Be involved as best you can in worship and the many events that are planned. Continue to give, so that the ministry we’ve been called to accomplish and fulfill can remain vibrant and strong. Finally, be thankful for our community of faith. Be thankful to God, who created and creates our days and seasons, a God that is still speaking in the midst of this odd and wondrous time.
Blessings this summer,
Pastor Butch

We value all lives and believe every person is sacred and a beloved child of God. Therefore, I am pleased to let you know that on June 15, 2021, the Zwingli church council affirmed the Open and Affirming (ONA) Covenant that has been presented by our ONA and Covenant Creation Committee.

On August 29, 2021 and for several weeks after we will be in the process of affirming that covenant in worship. As you prayerfully consider whether you will join the church leadership in affirming the ONA covenant, we invite you in July and August to ask us questions, and enter into conversation with Pastor Butch and Pastor Alan, and the rest of the ONA committee.

As you have questions, comments, and concerns, or want to just talk about it, we invite you to reach out to us. You can ask questions by contacting the church office via phone or email (office@zwingli.org), or Pastor Butch and Pastor Alan directly at pastorbutch@zwingli.org, or pastoralalan@zwingli.org, or by calling the church office. What an exciting time to be the church. Our God is still speaking, and we are still listening.

We choose to purposefully welcome and include all people in every aspect of our church family including worship, fellowship, and leadership, lay and ordained, and will meet you where you are on life’s journey to share God’s love with you. It is our commitment that all members should feel and be safe, as we express God’s universal and unconditional love in our church, community and daily lives.

What Should I Say or Avoid Saying To Someone Who is Grieving?

By Louis Kuykendall Jr., D.Min

Blessed are those who mourn, for they will be comforted. - Matthew 5:4

When someone is grieving or mourning it’s often difficult to know what to do or say to them. This feeling is a common experience, and may arise due to fears we will say something thoughtless, or will cause greater sadness for the bereaved friend when we bring up the loss. Or maybe, in a desire to comfort and support those who are grieving, we want to say or do just the right thing that will help the bereaved feel happy or find healing. The discomfort arises as well because it’s hard to be with someone who is sad, or to see a friend hurting. Loss, and especially death, makes many of us uncomfortable, perhaps due to feelings about our mortality, or sense of how the world should work, or fear of the unknown, or because we feel powerless to make things better when others suffer a loss. Whatever the source of uneasiness, those who befriend and support the bereaved are often at a loss for words.

Each situation regarding loss and grief is unique. What may be fine to say in one instance may be inappropriate in another. However, there are some common guidelines and phrases that are helpful, or that should be avoided, when talking with someone who is grieving. The following lists are not exhaustive regarding what to say or not say, but hopefully will offer examples for comforting the bereaved. Remember that you cannot take away the pain, but you can be a resource of support and even hope and healing.

Possible things to say to a friend, acquaintance, or loved one who is grieving:

1. The first thing to consider is whether you need to say anything at all. Being present with and listening to the person grieving is one of the most important things a friend or family member can do.
2. Do not be afraid to talk about or mention the person who died, or talk about the pet lost, or refer to the situation that underlies the grief. However, be sensitive to the needs of the bereaved and what they are willing to talk about. For example, a daughter lost her mother, Gloria, in the summer. When the extended family gathered for Thanksgiving dinner, no one mentioned the mother’s name. The daughter was heartbroken and felt the other family members’ refusal to speak her mother’s name aloud dishonored her life and memory. Although the daughter was not looking for a deep conversation about her (and their) loss, simply saying “we miss Gloria” would have acknowledged her mother’s death and the feelings that accompanied the loss.
3. Acknowledge the pain and sadness.
4. “If you can (or “if you’re ready”) tell me more about your brother. He was such a special person.”
5. “You can talk to me about your dad any time you want.”
6. “I am so saddened by your loss.”
7. “Feeling sadness and anger is normal,” or “Feeling grief is normal.”
8. “Do you want to talk about it?”
9. “Pets are such a part of the family. I know you will miss Sophie.”
10. “I’m thinking about you/praying for you.”
11. “I remember when your sister...” Sharing a memory that is dear to you can be helpful.
12. “I miss him too, so I can only imagine the pain you’re feeling.”
13. “I wish I had the words to help—just know that I am here for you”
14. “This really sucks,” or “This is really hard.”
15. “I’ve got a big shoulder, so don’t be afraid to let go and feel what you need to feel.”
16. “Whenever you’re ready, I am willing to listen and help if I can...” You can help a friend do things like plan for the funeral, think about other job possibilities, brainstorm a new direction in life or college to attend, research ways to participate in charitable organizations that offer a connection to the loved one or friend they lost. Of course, timing is critical regarding how and when to offer help.

Examples of what not to do and say:
1. Avoid being overly cheery or looking for a bright side.
2. "You'll be stronger because of this," or "Be brave."
3. "It's God's plan," or "This is God's will."
4. "You have other siblings" (or friends, or "at least you have your mother").
5. "They're in a better place."
6. "Stop being so dramatic," or dismissing the loss (e.g., the death of a pet, or loss of a relationship)
7. "It's time to move on," or "Get over it."
8. "I know how you feel." Even if you have lost someone close, or experienced a similar loss, does not mean you know how the friend or loved one feels. Each individual's grief and path are unique. The bereaved may be open to your comfort and advice because they know about your loss, whatever it may be. However, be careful not to equate the feelings and circumstances and be mindful of the process the friend needs to deal with.
9. "Please stop crying, it will be alright," or "Get it together."
10. "Shouldn't you be more upset?" Avoid telling others how to grieve.
11. "Oh, you'll find another boyfriend/girlfriend."
12. "At least your grandmother lived to 93."
13. "You'll get into another school, just keep trying."
14. "Don't you think it's time to get another pet."
15. "Time heals all wounds."
16. Don't try to answer the question "Why?"
